Commousease Remark cerator the Figure,

From Talks With Homely Girls.

"The beauty of the female figure," says Leigh Hunt, "consists in being gently serpentine." Stiffness is utterly ungracelul. The movements of an un conscions child are the perfection of grace. They are easy, unstudied, natural. The throat should be round and pillar-like. The waist should be twice the size of this "tower of ivouv." not. pillar-like. The waist should be twice the size of this "tower of ivouy," not, as fashion has too often made it, nearly the same size. The shoulders should be sloping, and not too broad; neither should they be too narrow, but occupy that off and rounded mean that is offered in Milo's Venus. The figure should be, above all, easy; too small a waist is an actual deformity, and young ladies who are foolish enough to imagladies who are foolish enough to imag-ine that a waist of eighteen inches is lovely, should bear in mind that the famous statue of the Venus de Medici, the acknowledged highest type of fe-male beauty, measures twenty-seven

The hips should be high in a woman and wide; the feet small, but in due proportion to the height of the figure; a high instep is beautiful, and a hollow-ing of the sole is considered by the Arabs a mark of high birth; the arm is seldom sufficiently developed in the modern woman of fashion to reach the modern woman of assion to reach the standard of classical beauty. She does not use her limbs, and particularly her arms, sufficiently to give them the mus-cular growth of which they are capable. The arm should have a round and flow-ing outline, with no sharpness at the elbow; it should taper gently down to a small wrist. Thin arms are ugly, and require graceful movements to conceal their sharpness. A white arm is beauti-ful, but a dark-complexioned arm may be more beautiful if it is better shaped, form being the chief loveliness of the arm. Keeping the elbows away from the sides, sticking out at the sides, is very nugraceful, and folded arms, a la Napoleon, or hands in the jacket pockets, detract from feminine grace.

Too great stoutness or thinness is to be avoided, the former by vigorous exercise and careful diet, eschewing those foods which are known as fleshchose foods which are known as fleshforming and fat-creating. Animal food is less fattening than bread, vegetables and puddings; beer and ale are to be avoided by too fat people, and claret substituted in their place. But starving the figure is a folly, and drafts from the vinegar-cruets and so called anti fat remedies are both condemned as in jurious; plumpness, it must be remem hered is he antiful; thinness or servery. pered, is be utiful; thinness or scraggi ness is ugly; and one thing, says the writer of the book, is certain—the com pression of the figure, even if too much inclined to embonpoint, is a mistake.
